This special event will feature two experts on international business protocol. Nancy Mitchell is an adjunct professor at George Washington University where she has developed and teaches courses in the School of Business and Public Management. For over 20 years, Nancy served as Director of Special Events and Public Programs at the Library of Congress.

Joining Ms. Mitchell will be Larry Dunham, a former Assistant Chief of Protocol of the US Department of State for more than 15 years. He now consults for business and government clients.

Both Ms. Mitchell and Mr. Dunham have presented similar briefings on international business protocol for graduate degree programs for American and international students at George Washington, George Mason and other local universities.

ISH is pleased to present this program as part of a series of educational and cultural activities designed to build community and encourage dialogue among the residents, supporters and friends of International Student House. We hope you can join us.
